SAMPLE REVIEWS

Markus Jäger, Darmstädter Echo (11.11.2019)

"Once again convincing... On Saturday evening, we experienced the impressive continuation of this interdisciplinary art project... The four sophisticated compositions by Obermüller [Reisende] proved to be extremely formidable and exquisitely challenging."

Felix Knoblauch, HÖRTZ24 (04.05.2017)

"Camilla Hoitenga opened the concert with ...silbern. From the beginning, filling the grand room with echoing spiccato attacks, forming the sound into a meditative experience, it was the melodious parts of the work that, through their airy approach and the resulting overtone chirp, dragged the listener back to reality."

Michael Sikora, Nürnberger Nachrichten (08.11.2016)

"The oratorio Kohlenmonoxyd.Nachtstück by Karola Obermüller was premiered in the Neues Museum in Nuremberg. A moving piece. The foyer of the Neues Museum with its simple and cool atmosphere could not be more suitable as a venue. The seating is far from sufficient and at the introductory event offered, for the first time, every open space was occupied by folding chairs. One can not really summarize the experience in words and the music also seems to reach its limits here. A musical monument is made.

In this premiere of the complete version of Kohlenmonoxyd.Nachtstück, the souls of about 70,000 mentally ill and disabled people who died terribly under the Third Reich are being commemorated. So-called "unworthy lives" were executed with carbon monoxide.

Naturally, the music should not be beautiful. This music is sinister, cold, threatening, and unscrupulous, but also innocent. The ensemble ...creates an ominous mood. With aspects of extreme playing techniques, cold and warmth are often felt simultaneously through long-lasting, shimmering harmonics in the four strings, metal plates, ...a horn in extreme situations and a yelling trombone. The participating choir is used as an instrument with microtonal layers of sound or with extremely stretched or unrecognizably segmented words (such as "schizophrenia").

The libretto by Gabriele Strassmann contains not only lyrical images of nature, but also protocols from patient conversations, reports from patients and letters from relatives. Their ignorance is presented in a particularly perfidious manner at the end, when the most courteous request is made to send the new green suit, which the deceased brother has always loved to wear, linked to the question of whether it would be possible to find out how his last time had been. "Whether he did not have a rather hard time dying." Actually one wants to cry at the end and not clap, but for many, clapping also seems to give a certain kind of relief."

Cora Uitting, Erlanger Nachrichten (22.04.2016)

"Completely radical is Karola Obermüller's third version (2015) of Nichts Fettes, nichts Süßes. During a first hearing, Schumann's songs and Carnival are not recognizable, because Obermüller has removed all obvious traces with rhythmic changes and blurring harmonic alterations. But there is a lot of Schumann's temperament in this eruptive work, which surges over the vocal parts of the flute and the cello in knotted tangles of sound excess."

Corinna da Fonseca-Wollheim, The New York Times (May 28, 2015)

"Ms. Obermüller's Myrmecia, scored for harp, guitar and hammered dulcimer, was named after a type of ant. The hyperkinetic music, built out of crisp high-pitched notes, has much of that insect's dogged diligence while the tangy intervals and microtones act like a microscope focusing the listener's attention onto a world teeming with tiny but determined life."

Klaus Trapp, Darmstädter Echo (February 26, 2014)

"Karola Obermüller found the inspiration for her work Red Lake Fields in Delhi, India. Artificial "lakes of red" reflect the outside world until cracks appear on the black ground underneath after they dry out. Tender noise and tapping gradually turns into a colorful world of sound, until the instruments come together in synchronous unity. A fascinating process, sensitively implemented by the musicians."

Matthew Guerrieri, NewMusicBox (April 22, 2013)

"The one premiere of the weekend demonstrated both the [Fromm] Foundation's penchant for the au courant and the virtues of giving its composers a wide berth. ...The electronics initially created an effective but familiar electronic fog of echoes which would coalesce around the instruments themselves and then detach, but, towards the end, Obermüller dialed back the processing to a minimum; with Hagino working the high and low extremes of the keyboard and Norsworthy jabbing in commentary, the music turned surprising and bewitching. Fromm, one suspects, would have enjoyed the return on his investment."

Hanna Styrie, Kölner Rundschau (12.03.2013)

"The central work of the program was the 30-minute oratorio Kohlenmonoxyd. ... Karola Obermüller reflects upon the Holocaust with her "Nachtstück" ...Music and language are connected here in a way that gets under your skin. The arid sounds of the instrumentalists seem like screams of pain."

Frieder Reininghaus, Deutschlandradio Kultur (29.09.2007)

"Dunkelrot (dark red) is characterized by high intensity and a constantly evolving sound. Dream sequences are submerged in colors different from those moments when the asylum seeker Mahjouba Mint Mamlouk (MMM) from an unspecified third world country is confronted with European bureaucracy. ...Dream-like tableaux of sound melt away and through highly expressive cantilena fragments, we learn the story of the suffering of the woman who studied law in Paris and who did not fare well after returning to her homeland. ...The cutting heights of the two violins and the massive brass section produce eloquently barbed and violent musical episodes based on the underlying theme: the rhetoric of threat and fear.

The most intense moment in the one-and-a-half hour work of Karola Obermüller comes in the instant when the process of deportation becomes palpable: a policewoman and a police officer, who clearly have little desire to do so, ...tie up MMM, forcing her into a motorcycle helmet. She does not yell her "Au secours! Au secours", but whispers it in the most intense way: does her voice fail her at this moment? Or should the listener, who is quite close to the plot and the acoustic performance of a chamber opera, suddenly be reminded of the distance he/she inevitably has to every real MMM as well as to her brothers and sisters in need? [...] Dunkelrot was dedicated to this place. And it premiered convincingly there at the right time."
